

ABSTRACTS

Since Google reached a settlement agreement with authors and publishers, it has become an important issue how to make the library books available on internet. And although Korea is proud of being a strong information technology country, eBooks are not as popular in Korea as in foreign countries. It is also a big issue how to develop the electronic publishing industry. Because Google has engaged in massive scale scanning and digitization of works without prior authorization of rights owners, it confronts the copyright problem. The Google Settlement exempts Google from copyright infringement. While it may cause some legal problems like antitrust, the Google Settlement suggests a solution for realizing a digital library. As solutions for developing electronic publishing industry and realizing digital libraries, this paper suggest that copyright in typographical arrangement be adopted, that collective management organization be actively utilized, and that the extended collective license be considered to be adopted.

Keywords : electronic publishing, digital library, collective management organization, extended collective license (ECL), copyright in typographical arrangement, Google Book Search, copyright, orphan works, liability rule, property rule